

In the second movie, the Jedi academy hunts Elise down. Elise is now an outcast in both worlds, having been accepted for the first time in her life in the previous one. The Jedi students treat her as a monster; she sees holograms of her image everywhere being distorted and mocked. She feels alone. Colt, as the hope of the Jedi and with hate in his heart over the death of his master, is sent out to hunt her, but with Aetha's convincing, he doesn't go through with it all and doesn't approach Elise, not even confronting her in person, as he cannot decide what to do. So the Jedi masters take it upon themselves to hunt Elise down. Then, Luke reaches out to her. Luke protects Elise against the Jedi masters, defeating all of them at once. He wraps Elise in a protective barrier and sends it away. But since Luke refuses to kill any of them, Luke now is surrounded by the Jedi he defeated, who are backed with new arriving reinforcements. Knowing he has no way out, he lays down his weapon and tells the Jedi that this is not the Jedi way, that if they strike him down, they will go to the dark side. The Jedi do not listen and each take their turn stabbing him as Luke still stands and uses the last of his Force to maintain the protective barrier that is carrying Elise away. Elise watches as Luke dies, and once she is away, he smiles weakly and becomes one with the Force like Obi Wan did.

As this is happening, Aetha is with the Sith headmaster, who projects a vision of what is happening. The Sith headmaster manipulated these events so the Jedi would fall to the dark side by adhering strictly to their feared prophecy. The more they turn, the stronger the headmaster gets. Elise, who was conflicted before, now joins the Sith in their attack on Jedi academy. She attacks all the students who wronged her or did nothing as they hunted her down. The headmaster gives Aetha a decision to join or oppose Elise. Aetha is mocked by the Jedi for being inept, and once they out her identity, they shun her too. Aetha runs back to the academy as Elise is mowing down her bullies, and Elise is happy because she thinks Aetha will join her. But Aetha ignites her dual yellow lightsaber, as its hue cloud into orange again. She says that Luke has taught her not to take revenge, and that she has now embraced both sides of her heritage, not fearing the orange as 'evil'. Aetha steps between Elise and her classmates, and Duel of the Fates begins to play.

Before Luke's death, Sith are tortured by Jedi and hospitalized. This makes Elise want to attack them, but she is intercepted by Luke. With Luke's help, Elise is nearly turned back, but the two are ambushed by the dogmatic Jedi masters who fear Elise. At this point, the only Jedi Elise killed was Colt's master, as this was out of self-defense. Luke tells the Jedi that Elise has not done anything wrong yet. These Jedi masters are not all Luke's students; many are old blood of the World of the Whills, so they do not share his philosophy. Some even despise this outsider taking control of their establishments; Luke was brought in by the leaders to help save the dying world, and he helped the world recover, but he is still treated as a foreigner.

After Elise defeats Aetha, she breaks down and cries in guilt, as she killed many of her former classmates who were 'on the fence' and did not directly participate. The Sith told her they were complying with the Jedi, as they did not speak out, and thus should die, too, and Elise listened. Now, Elise believes the Jedi must fall for their oppression of the Sith.

In the 3rd movie, Mila is killed by the Jedi when she attacks them under duty from her family, reinforcing Elise's belief that the Jedi should die. Mila is afraid, but feels she has no choice. She actually just wants to live a normal life, but thinks the only way she can do so is by listening to orders from the dark side to eliminate the Jedi, who threaten her way to a better life. Mila does not die protecting or being against Elise, she just attacks Jedi to appease her honor with great reluctance and Elise watches her friend die.

The World of the Whills, unlike the outside galaxy, has rights given to both Jedi and Sith. It treats them like two political parties, rather than needing to hunt down the Sith. They are in an uneasy political war, mirroring the cold war of the West and Communism. Then, at the end of the second movie, war breaks out and many government run Jedi institutions, including the school, are attacked by the Sith; the Jedi retaliate, and the equivalent of nuclear war ignites.

With Luke gone, and the Skywalkers cutting ties with it, the school tries to save itself by installing Ahsoka as its new headmaster. The recovering school does well under her governance, and Aetha and other students are able to complete their studies under war. Colt and Magyi reluctantly still attend the school as they want to finish their degrees and be able to integrate into Whills society, but they are emotionally distraught over the death of their grandfather at the hands of some of the school. The school is in turmoil, heavily split but glued together over the need to unite against a common enemy, the Sith. The third movie shows the unruly faction of Jedi plotting, and eventually enacting, a vengeful plan to attack the Sith school.

The microscopic world of the Whills, where the Sith headmaster came from, resembles a psychaesthetic trip, with many 'machine elves' holding up the Force and connecting it to all living things. Aetha visits this realm in the second movie and learns the origin of the headmaster. He had abandoned and imprisoned his light side in this realm, and escaped to the physical world. The headmaster tricks Aetha into thinking that she must rise against those who oppressed her.

In the second movie, Elise duels Colt, but they are both interrupted. Elise duels Aetha, and wins over her. In the third movie, an emotionally unstable Elise loses to Aetha, but threatens her friend that she will unleash her forbidden powers that will take both of them down. Aetha talks Elise out of it. Elise laments that she is gone too far, and wishes none of this ever happened. She feels like she doesn't deserve forgiveness and needs to be stricken down, threatening that if she doesn't, she'll use her powers to kill them both. Aetha lets down her weapon and tells Elise that she doesn't need to kill them both; she can kill her if she wants. But she tells Elise that she can still change, and that Aetha will help her. Aetha embraces Elise and tells Elise she is free to stab her. Overcome with emotion, Elise hugs her back and the two cry in each other's arms. With this unexpected turn of events, the Sith headmaster is unable to usurp the power of the Force. His plan was that if Elise died, the Jedi would turn dark and usher in a totalitarian regime of war, becoming the dark side they wanted to destroy but not admitting it. If Aetha died, the same would happen for the Sith. Now, his plans disrupted, the Sith headmaster loses control of the Force, along with most of his powers. With his strength diminished, Colt and Magyi take him down by using a trick against him, as is in many myths when humans go up against trickster deities.

The end of the saga shows Elise and Grant recovering in therapeutic care. They are constantly being watched and must do volunteer work to redeem themselves, being punished but also being reformed. The two kissed one another during the middle of the third movie, but their relationship is still ambiguous. They see each other as friends, at least, in care together. Aetha has not kissed Krystov yet, but he confessed his feelings for her during the third movie, to which Aetha said she was embarrassed. Blushes, and will take some time to think about it. At the end of the movie, she smiles and says she will accept his offer of a date. Their relationship, again, remains ambiguous. Colt's relationship with the homely girl is not ambiguous, and the two are really into one another. Magyi doesn't have anyone hinted for her, yet. Elise and Aetha remain close, possibly more intimate than others think. They considered one another 'best friends' despite communicating remotely, as they were there for one another in their dorms when no one else was, giving each other emotional support and sharing their stories.

There are many comfy study sessions for all students, such as Magyi with a warm cup of some alien drink, like the lofi hiphop girl on an interstellar planet. 'Winter storm on Hoth', camping in the alien tundras, supernovas, the bending of light and gravity, quantum awe, etc.

Though the movie score is very much fantasy John Williams, some Vangelis synthwave is heard at times, especially during the psychedelic trips in the Whills and Netherworld. The end scene with Elise embracing Aetha sounds like 'Tears in Rain' or Zimmer's 'Mesa'.

Aetha has special powers resembling those of the Nightsister and Talzin, but they do helpful things. At first, Aetha thought they were dark side powers and tries to hide them. But Luke tells her not to stereotype and judge just because of associations, and shows her they can be used for good. In the third movie, when Aetha realizes that she's the Chosen Light instead of Colt and the Jedi shift their attention from him to pressure her into killing Elise, Aetha realizes those powers were those of the Chosen Light. Elise has 'Elsa moments' in the second movie where she learns to not hide her powers, which the Jedi shamed her for due to the accidental destruction they caused, and feels free in the dark.

When Colt duels Grant in the 3rd movie, they are not interrupted by an outside force. Instead, both realize they will do not good by fighting one another, and end it in a tie. (Before this battle, Grant had put himself in harm's way to save Elise from Jedi, injuring himself). They both decide they have to go to the Jedi and show them that the Sith are not all bad. Grant has information and access to Sith security which allows the Jedi to defeat the Sith headmaster's army. This moment is also when the Jedi and Colt turn against the Jedi who killed Luke, declaring that Luke's death was unjustified and a crime (previously, those Jedi claimed Luke had to be executed as a traitor, and many agreed with them out of mob rule and fear of being called a 'traitor' too). After arresting the fallen Jedi, Grant, Colt and Magyi join the Jedi to take down the Sith headmaster; this occurs AFTER the Jedi attacked the Sith school in the middle of the movie. That attack turned out to be a trick that the Sith headmaster led the Jedi into so they could embrace the dark side even more, as the Jedi attacked 'innocent' dark side students, too.

The Jedi learn that not all 'dark' powers are evil. Though the dark side is evil, certain aspects of the Sith are simply empowering the individual, making them enjoy their own lives better. The two sides learn to strike a balance while still attacking those who wish to turn these individual empowerments into weapons of evil.

Grant does not confront the Sith headmaster, and is separated from the other two. Colt and Magyi ventured into the psychedelic world in the third movie, led by Aetha, and learned the truth of the Sith headmaster. As descendants of the Skywalkers, who saved the outside galaxy, they now seek to save the World of the Whills.

After joining the Sith, Elise saves many Sith and dark side civilians. She also spares Aetha and Colt's life in the second movie; despite defeating Aetha, she does not kill her, and her hesitation allows Aetha to be rescued. So actually when Colt hunts Elise, he does duel her. Elise gets the upper hand but spares him when she could've ended it, but Colt is not done fighting yet and gets up and they continue fighting. As they fight, Aetha intervenes and stops the duel. Aetha is unable to raise her saber against Elise to fight her with Colt, however, and Elise escapes. Now the Jedi do not trust Aetha even more and suspect she will fall to the dark side, as they claim she never left it.

Several of Elise's former close friends/classmates who were friendly with her lie and say they want to meet her and help her escape. When she meets them, however, they betray her and attack her, intending to capture her in revenge for the death of Colt's master. They don't believe it was in self-defense and won't listen to anything Elise says. Elise is forced to attack them back, but spares their life. During the attack on Jedi academy, after Luke's death, Elise kills them mercilessly, telling them to beg before they die.

Elise's eyes are not yellow. When she turns to the dark side, they glow a dark, ominous blue, like ice in the deepest depths of the arctic ocean. This happens after Luke's death; Elise decides she must take revenge, and her eyes finally begin to change. Her lightsaber is a darker blue than all other Jedi's.

Contrary to previous movies, most lightsabers have different shades or hues, and some even have patterns. Jedi all have lighter ones, while Sith have darker ones. This is because the World of the Whills' culture operates differently.

Due to the neutral agreements between Sith and Jedi, their two schools have sports events to compete with one another. There are several schools based on different philosophies, and Jedi and Sith are the main ones. Actually, in the World of Whills, they're not called Jedi and Sith, but different names. 'Jedi' is a term that carries over from Luke. The light side warriors do not like the Jedi, though some of them identify as Jedi after learning of Luke's teachings from the outside galaxy.

In the first movie, Colt's master defeats Aetha because the girl stands in his way. Aetha thinks he's coming for her, so she springs an ambush on him, but he makes quick work of her. Then Elise steps in between them, telling him he can't kill Aetha. However, Colt's master then says he wasn't here for Aetha at all; he was here to find Elise.

Elise is always shown to be stronger than Aetha, as the blonde girl is a natural talent, and thus many are jealous of her and outcast her for having weird, creepy powers that don't allow her to fit in anywhere. Elise falls into both Varactyl and Krayt, while Aetha goes into Sarlacc and Bantha. Aetha doesn't kill any Jedi at the first scene, only a couple of civilian soldiers and militia. Aetha constantly loses until she begins to embrace her true self during the second movie, and wins her first saber duel during the start-middle of the third movie. However, she does win several non-saber duels before then, such as piloting during sports games and war. She helps her team win in the second movie, but they discount her and she feels angry that they do. Aetha defeats Elise in the third movie, and spares her, which leads to Elise's 'nuclear-like' threats.

Rewrite of the houses:

- Varactyl: loyal and organized and righteous. Intelligent, they make excellent bureaucrats and generals. A mix of Gryffindor and Ravenclaw.
- Tauntaun: a mix of Hufflepuffs and Gryffindors. Brave, self-sacrificing, able to withstand any challenge

Colt and Elise both are in Varactyl, while Krystov is in Bantha, like Aetha. Kaita falls into Varactyl. Many think Kaita will get with Colt, though she isn't interested in him. They wonder why Aetha hangs with two of the most popular in the school, despite having little other friends.

After learning the truth of Luke's death, Colt and Magyi immediately turn against their former teachers.

"Krayt" may be replaced by "Zillo" or "Terentatek" or Tuk'ata, etc

The trickster Sith's main goal is like the Joker, to cause chaos. He does not care much for power like Palpatine; he just wants to watch the world burn, to troll. Only by turning the Joker against him can he be defeated. Though they duel him first using sabers (he doesn't use a lightsaber), he does not die by a lightsaber duel, but by trickery.

At the first scene, a masked Aetha slices through militia and gets to Elise. The two meet face to face, and then Colt intervenes and knocks Aetha down. He is about to strike her until another masked Sith (not Mila, possibly Grant) stops him, then all the Sith retreat as the Jedi have the upper hand.

Aetha and Elise first see one another in Coruscant and don't realize they're enemies. But soon after they leave Aetha learns Elise is her enemy, and can't believe it. When they next see each other, it's in battle out of neutral grounds, and Aetha aims to kill Elise. But Aetha gets injured and is betrayed by a Sith who have something against her. Elise dispatches the Sith student, and runs away with Aetha. Aetha is surprised that Elise would save her; Elise says she couldn't let the one she bonded with in Coruscant be harmed. Aetha is still conflicted and departs from Elise, saying next time, she'll kill her. When they depart, that is when the slight Force bond begins to form; it is not that strong yet until the start of the second movie, however. Through the force bond, the two's feelings towards one another begin to become more sentimental.

During the second movie, Elise can talk to Aetha through the Force bond, but is not able to see through it. Aetha is at a beautiful location in the academy that Elise misses, and Elise wishes that Aetha describe it to her. Elise then tells Aetha to go to a location where Elise left something valuable. She tells Aetha to pick it up and keep it safe. She tells her that this will be a secret only the two of them share, and it makes them feel closer to each other. But at the final battle, after Aetha is defeated, Elise snatches the item away from Aetha.

When the other teachers attack Luke, they say they cannot kill him; they must use the Force to reach into his mind and figure out how to destroy the protective barrier Elise is in. If he dies, the barrier cannot be broken. But Luke cannot die just yet, as he must be alive to move the barrier away. Luke uses all he can to prevent them from reaching in. At this point, Luke has let down his lightsaber, using all his concentration to move Elise away and open up a portal to elsewhere. They torture him, stabbing him and de-limbing him, but he does not relent. Finally, still standing despite being attacked in his knees, Luke smiles when he knows the others have not been able to destroy the barrier, and Elise is now gone, transported through a portal. When the Jedi strike him down, Luke dissipates like Obi Wan.

Elise is angered at the traitorous Jedi. She wants to reach them, but they are all hiding deep within Jedi academy, using the students as shields. Elise cuts through the students just to get to those who murdered Luke.

When Ahsoka becomes headmaster, she suspects something is up with the Jedi's account of Luke's 'betrayal'. She is the one who ultimately listens to Colt and Grant, and decides to arrest the traitorous Jedi. Before becoming headmaster, Ahsoka has done much to integrate into the World of the Whills; she learns she was descended from someone who came there, and thus actually belongs to their Old Blood. Thus, the World of the Whills is quicker to accept her as one of their own. She goes around helping people, becoming a legendary figure like Luke, and takes on a government leadership position, which makes the insiders trust her even more. This is what makes them think she will be a headmaster that agrees with them.

In the final scene with Aetha and Elise, just before Elise is about to turn, she tells Aetha, "You're my best friend. I love you." The two then hug, but don't kiss. When they force bond, there is one scene in which a subdued song with slight hints of Across the Stars plays.

Even though Han is King, he does not sit on the throne most of the time. He goes on various missions with his army, wearing a blade-runner-esque outfit that has many collars and pads, indicating his high status. Though Alderaan is destroyed, the kingdom has re-established itself elsewhere. Things are running smoothly in the New Republic, but the main turmoil is its relations with the World of the Whills. Han has to go on secret missions to investigate the shady dealings happening over there with its politicians. While Colt is in school, Han tells him if he wants to accompany his grandfather between classes. Colt, despite being burdened with missions from his teachers and podracing, enthusiastically says 'yes'. As a result, he's burned out with classes and doesn't do well.

Elise desperately wants Aetha to send messages to Colt and the others, but knows she can't, as their Force bond must remain a secret. Later, after Aetha intervenes in his fight with Elise, Colt discovers Aetha's force bond, but chooses to keep it a secret, too. Luke knows of it, as Aetha feels she can open up to him due to his positive feelings towards Elise. Luke is the only hope of Elise turning back.

The revived Obi doesn't appear until the middle of the third movie. He doesn't play much of an active role, but is crucial for both Elise and Aetha when they meet him. He lives within a world between the Whills and the Netherworld, one even deeper than the already etheric World of the Whills. He doesn't participate in fights, and plays more of a mentor force ghost role when they find him.

Before their first duel at the end of the second movie, Elise saves Aetha twice during the first movie, and Aetha saves Elise once in the second. After that, they do not save one another until the very end of the third movie.

Grant becomes Colt's rival. They first cross blades when Grant saves Aetha from Colt in the first scene. Then, they frequently duel throughout the trilogy. Colt and Grant discuss Elise during their first fight after Elise turns.

Just before Elise and Aetha duel for the first time, Aetha is wearing a hooded robe like her grandfather. When she takes it off, she ignites her lightsaber, not needing to say a word for Elise to know that she has decided to turn against her. Her face is a picture of a human's with black linings and red spots and horns, contrasting with her total alien face during Jedi academy. Elise cuts Aetha's lightsaber in half during their fight then kicks her, just like Obi and Maul's duel. Aetha repairs the blade before the third movie.

Before Luke duels dozens of teachers, he appears in battle only using the Force, not using a lightsaber. Leia does use a lightsaber to fight several assassins who threaten them when Elise vacations at Colt's place. They think these assassins are sent by the Sith, but something just doesn't add up.

Aetha's appearance is always dirty and unkempt, like a female Rorscarch. Elise, despite being a farmgirl from the hills and riverbanks, is elegant and pristine. She takes care of her appearance with what little she can use. Then, after she gets to Jedi academy, she finds many ways to polish up, looking like royalty during its dances and balls.

Aetha does not think much of Grant. She knows Grant, even though he's fearsome, cares to protect her over most other Sith. But Grant always insults her with what little he has to say and doesn't give her any support.

In the third movie, Mila dies when she relentlessly attacks a weakened Aetha. Just as she's about to strike her down, several Jedi troops all blast Mila and kill her. Elise watches from afar (unable to get to either of them in time) and blames Aetha, as Aetha was the one who triggered Mila. Aetha saw Mila attacking the Jedi so she attacked her.

In the second or third movie, there is a scene where Luke's son (the chef) fights Colt's father, his cousin. In the second movie, there is also a sequence of Luke, Han and Leia adventuring together, with Luke and Leia fighting side by side with lightsabers. So Luke does use his lightsaber before his final scene.

Ahsoka authorizes the attack on the Sith academy. After reading through the reports, she feels like she has no choice but to go along with the military's demands to deploy the students training to be soldiers, as is the law. She is reluctant, but must go along with orders. But she begins to question this, and remembers her time in the Jedi Order, when she went against the norm. Secretly, she listens to information that there is treachery amongst the new Jedi.

During the second movie, the two main girls meet up and journey together for a few sequences. They actually go into the psychadelic world together. But while Aetha sees good things, Elise is plagued by nightmares, and then they get separated after Aetha tries to find Elise. Elise meets up with Luke, while Aetha is abducted by the Sith headmaster.

Leia and Han survive the entire trilogy. Luke's force ghost appears to Aetha; he says he is unable to reach Elise due to the dark side keeping his spirit out. He leads Aetha to Obi Wan.

Though most of the treacherous Jedi are arrested, Elise and the Sith do manage to kill a few of Luke's murderers. Ahsoka also kills a few in self-defense when they try to resist arrest; Ahsoka kills the main conspirator who ordered Luke's death.

Grant giving himself up to the Jedi breaks a barrier that allows Luke's force ghost to return; Ahsoka sees him, and Luke reveals the truth in front of his murderers. Luke watches his murderers get arrested and receive justice.

While Sith and Jedi are unofficially at 'peace', Sith still go around attacking places considered to be 'unlawfully intruding' on them. Sith and Jedi have secret terrorist attacks against one another, away from the eyes of the corrupt law, and a large scale war doesn't break out until the third movie.

Actually Elise and Aetha should fight the Sith headmaster, while Colt and Magyi fight the head Jedi conspirator who murdered Luke; this guy is now powered up with some weird Force spirit trickster god.

The dark and light side entities are sworn enemies. Their bickering has made them usurp the people of Whills to fight their wars for them. The light entity possesses Luke's main murderer, who was the former failed headmaster of Jedi Academy that was demoted to a teacher after an incident he failed to stop and was blamed for. Luke's main murderer is jealous of Luke. The Sith headmaster delves too deep into occultic rituals and is possessed against his will by the Sith entity, which takes over his school, unbeknownst to the others in it. When the Skywalkers defeat the Light side evil entity, and the Maul/Kenobi descendants defeat the Dark side evil entity, balance is brought to the Force in the Whills, just as Anakin balanced it in the outside galaxy.

When Elise is turned back by Aetha, she finally says something along the beats of, "Why would I ever do X? You're my best friend, Aetha. I love you."

When Elise defeats Aetha at the end of the second movie, she cuts off her hand and immediately slashes her back. Then, she de-ignites her lightsaber and spares Aetha. When Elise gets back, she lies to the Sith that Aetha got away, but they see through her lies due to sensing her unsteady feelings, and threaten that if she does not kill Aetha next time, there will be consequences and torture to pay (they cannot kill her as she's the prophetic Chosen Dark).

Aetha meets Obi in the third movie and is briefly trained by him, learning an important lesson.

Some of the architecture of the Whills resembles that of a striped mosque, lots of colorful geometric patterns. This is like how the prequels were inspired by Roman architecture.

Elise and Aetha journey together during the movies, but only duel a common enemy in the third movie's end.
