

Released movies: Wonder Woman, Superman, Batman, Aquaman, BvS, Flash

<<<

Batman v Superman:

Superman is feared as a god amongst humans. Batman believes he has too much power, and has prepared a plan to contain Superman using Kryptonite in case he ever goes haywire. Lex Luthor, seen as a hero by the public, seeks to frame Batman. He misleads the public into thinking that Batman is evil. Exploiting Batman's desire for revenge, he tricks Batman into a position where he tries to take revenge on Superman, tricking Batman into thinking that Superman committed the crime. Someone close to Lex Luthor was killed. The public is not 100% sure if Batman or Superman committed the crime, but now there is more evidence that Batman did it. The public has no idea what Batman wants because he operates in the shadows, and they fear Superman. Superman is ordered by the US to stop Batman. If Superman stops the destruction, then the public will see him as who he truly is. Lex Luthor believes Superman is a danger to society, and Lex Luthor wanted Batman to kill Superman (by Lex Luthor's calculations, he was the only one that could) in self-defense by forcing Superman to attack Batman.

Superman and Batman fight but then Batman realizes they were tricked, and they team up to stop Lex Luthor. Superman is forced into a hard position: he has to kill Lex Luthor to stop his destruction, but then the public would think Superman killed their hero. Batman realizes that he has to show Superman as a sign of hope, and the public mind has just recently shifted into thinking that Superman was a hero. Only either Batman or Superman can stop the villain. Thus, on public TV, Batman kills Lex Luthor, reinforcing the Luthor's lie that image that Batman is evil. Unfortunately, Superman, the only other one who knows the truth, is forced to sacrifice himself to stop another attack by a monster (surrounded by Kryptonite) that Lex Luthor had created.

Batman is torn between revenge and justice, which are functionally very similar yet are done with different intents, and thus, cause different consequences. He is tied to his past, and thus is determined to stop the unjust crimes against innocents. The people of Gotham need Batman, yet many stand against him too.

End scene has Flash having some way of providing evidence, giving hope that the truth will be revealed

<<<

Justice League:

After Superman's death, the world seeks another hero. Meanwhile, in Themyscira, Circe is seen talking to Orm through a magic globe. Wonder Woman walks in on her and thinks she's suspicious. But just then, she's alerted that a monster is attacking Metropolis, so Wonder Woman, who had returned to the Amazonians after WWI but now realizes she is needed to save the humans, heads to the US to stop it (Circe tells her that the only way she can get there in time is if she transports her). However, a second one appears from across the city. She rushes to defeat it but can't get there in time. Just when she does, Superman arrives and stops it. The public is in awe and reaches out to him, but he does not descend to greet them. Instead, Superman gives a speech about how humans need to be governed, and declares himself as the new ruler of the world. The public is split- some decide to follow him while others oppose him. Left with no choice, this evil Superman orders his new followers to gather up a new army, forcing Lex Luthor Jr under his control, and takes over the planet. Wonder Woman vows to protect the public against evil Superman's army. University student Victor Stone witnesses all these events in the city but is injured in the ensuing destruction. His father tries to use his technology to save him.

Barry Allen hears the news and believes he has to find a way to stop evil Superman. He investigates a strange occurrence and sees a shadow at the same spots he goes to.

Batman is declared a criminal by the government. Bruce Wayne has temporarily stopped being Batman, but with crime still on the rise in Gotham, he realizes he must assume a different identity to scare criminals. However, Gotham detectives believe that this new crime fighter is likely Batman, or knows something about him, and try to capture him as he's fighting criminals. Bruce is annoyed by this. Meanwhile, he is also investigating the same case as Barry Allen, but from a different angle. Batman (in his new disguise that resembles Deathstroke) and Barry meet each other when investigating the same location, but Barry thinks Batman is evil. Batman has prepared to stop the Flash in case they fight.

Lois goes to Superman to try to convince him to stop. However, Superman tells her that he has to use his powers to their full extent to stop war and destruction. He shows Lois that he has ordered Lex Luthor Jr to control the people with as little bloodshed as possible, though he realizes that realistically, there must be some bloodshed upon those who resist him. He also tells her that he came from a different timeline, but does not reveal details on what happened there or how he was able to cross over timelines. Lois tries to leave, but Superman barricades her in, telling her that if they discover his true identity, then she will be in danger. Superman also orders the destruction of all kryptonite on Earth, rendering himself invincible.

Superman does not want to kill Batman or reveal his identity because he respects him, but warns him to stand down. Batman does not do so and Superman orders a secret attack on Bruce Wayne's mansion in an effort to destroy the Batcave, and the media thinks it was an accidental fire. Alfred and Bruce escape; Bruce's new suit is damaged so he is forced to don the Batman cowl again, which is the only one left (there was one backup suit on the Batwing that they escaped on). Batman goes to Barry and tells him to come with him to escape; Superman's troops try to snipe Barry Allen with a Speed Force draining serum but Batman stops them. Batman convinces the Flash that he was framed by Lex Luthor (and also that Batman was able to stop Superman before, so regardless of whether he's good or evil, he's needed), and that they need to team up to stop the evil Superman. But by themselves, they stand no chance against the robot army. Batman tells Flash that they have to recruit the Amazonians and Atlanteans to battle Lex's robot army that evil Superman has now taken over.

Batman believes that Wonder Woman and Aquaman are needed to sway the two civilizations to help the humans. Through his private investigations, he realizes evil Superman is not the same Superman he knew, and he also knows that the key to resurrecting Superman (note: the Lazarus pits were all destroyed in the Batman movie) requires cooperation between the Amazonians and Atlanteans- both of them have part of a special item, given to the humans by the gods, that can be used to summon an orb which can resurrect any being, even without the body present. But when the Amazonians and Atlanteans fought for this item to resurrect their own leaders killed by the humans, this artifact was broken into three and sealed away in each respective civilization.

Batman and the Flash recruit Wonder Woman, who has been going around protecting people who are against evil Superman's reign, but Batman has a hard time getting to Aquaman, who does not want anything to do with Atlantis, which is inaccessible to the trio without an Atlantean. Without Aquaman, the trio proceed to Themyscira. Due to Circe's magical control, Wonder Woman is unable to sway the Amazonians. Hippolyta orders the Amazonians to attack the trio. But Wonder Woman uncovers Circe's scheme and tells the Flash how to disrupt part of Circe's magic to abolish her mind control. He manages to partly reverse it, but Circe stops him and so half of the Amazonians (including the royalty) remain under her spell. Wonder Woman's speech has ignited a rebellion within the Amazonians. A civil skirmish ensues and the trio battle Circe to escape. They are protected by a small group of warriors who hide them away.

They tell her that Circe is collaborating with Orm to secretly resurrect Lex Luthor, who promised them that he would give them half of the human's civilization to rule under each, as long as they both pledged loyalty to him so that he would rule the entire world. Before Lex Luthor's death, he told Circe and Orm that if he dies, they should collect the 3 artifact pieces to revive him. Circe realizes she can't obtain the Amazonian's piece without a lot of help (since it's heavily guarded and she doesn't know the codes to overcome the traps protecting it), so she waits for Superman to come so he can help her take over Themyscira, kill its magical guardians, and then, with the protective spells against mind control gone, she will mind control everyone to be loyal to her. Orm and Circe plan to double cross evil Superman, as only Lex Luthor knows where the final, hidden stash of kryptonite is that can stop him, and once Lex Luthor is revived, due to the robot's programming, the entire army will listen to him. Evil Superman is still a noble man of his word and does not plan to double cross them. Their offer is to side with Superman, and in exchange, he would find where the final piece resides and give it to them. Likewise, the Atlantean throne has been usurped by Prince Orm. Many of the Atlanteans and Amazons agree with their isolationist policies too, though this sentiment is not universal in each kingdom. The two civilizations have talked to evil Superman and agreed that evil Superman does not interfere in their own civilizations, and that he only governs the humans, who are more prone to war, and were the cause of Superman's change in heart.

Meanwhile, Aquaman tries to protect local fishing villages and wildlife from humans seeking to severely damage the ocean. He comes across Lex Luthor Jr's people and realizes they are endangering Atlantis's freedom, environment and wildlife. Though he does not want to go back, he chooses to do so anyways, and discovers that his mother is dead and has been replaced by Orm, his half brother. Aquaman fights him, but the army overpowers him. He is imprisoned as a 'traitor' who escaped and did not stay to protect his mother from 'mysterious assassins'.

Just when all hope is lost, the mysterious person who has been appearing in/out arrives to reveal himself to the main trio as the future, alternative Flash, who has been popping in and out of the Speed Force. He has finally managed to regain his body, but has lost connection to much of the Speed Force. He explains how evil Superman came to be:

It is revealed that the evil Superman came about in the alternative timeline after Superman killed the villain in BvS. Batman is killed trying to stop the attack, and Superman is vilified. He tries to leave the planet or isolate himself. His civilian identity, threatened to be revealed by the villain upon his death, is revealed, and Lex Luthor Jr and his men secretly take Lois Lane hostage to lure Superman out so they can kill him with Kryptonite. Superman does not want to kill anyone, but when he hesitates, Lois is killed. In a fit of rage, Superman kills Lex Luthor Jr, and the news picks up on this and vows to go to war with Superman.

Over time, Superman thinks that Lex Luthor was right- he can stop destruction if he governs the world by imposing order onto it, just as Lex Luthor wanted to do by himself. Superman becomes the very thing that Lex Luthor painted him as. After several years, Superman has taken over the world. As a last ditch plan, the Flash hatches a plan to go back in time to prevent Superman from killing Lex Luthor and in BvS, successfully paves the way for Batman to kill Lex Luthor instead. However, this Flash was battling an evil Superman who managed to grab onto the Flash and arrive with him to the past. The alternative Flash tries to seal both himself and Superman within the Speed Force after arriving in the past, but by beating up the Flash, the alternative Superman manages to escape, and he and the Flash find themselves in Metropolis just as the monsters attack the city (these were monsters created by Circe to distract Wonder Woman and thus use the chance to take over the Amazons; using her fortune telling, she prophesized that Superman would return at that time and plotted with Orm to use Superman to resurrect Lex Luthor). The alternative Flash's connection to the Speed Force is damaged and he is unable to go back in time. The only thing he can do is help his younger self and Batman find a way to defeat evil Superman.

The alternative Flash tries to train the Flash to go faster so he can go through time and either trap Superman within the Speed Force, or go back in time to obtain kryptonite that Superman has not destroyed before. The alternative Flash warns the Flash that (unless it's a last ditch effort) he can't go back in time to change events because due to the butterfly effect, too many unwanted events can occur; he can only use it to obtain items. He also tells the trio that the 3rd piece of the artifact resides with the humans, and is currently being held by researchers in a top secret facility led by Silas Stone. Silas is using the artifact's power to create Cyborg. The Flash tells them that Cyborg can hack into the robot army to control it, and thus order them to attack Circe.

Lex Luthor Jr discovers what and where the human's artifact piece is, and sends an army to retrieve it from Silas. Batman uses his detective skills to sneak into the facility. Superman is led away by a distraction created by Batman. The heroes, with Cyborg, stop the army, but Silas is killed in the process. At the last minute, Superman discovers he was led into a dead end, and arrives at the facility to try to destroy Cyborg and get the artifact piece. Wonder Woman and Flash try to hold him off, but are unable to. With the help of Cyborg's new hacking abilities (which controls the entire facility), however, they are able to escape, but not with the 3rd artifact piece. The group tells Superman that Circe and Orm are using the piece to resurrect Lex Luthor, but he does not believe them, and in his arrogance, believes that even if they do, he is powerful enough to stop the traitors. Superman destroys the facility.

When the group is in hiding, Cyborg reluctantly forces himself to learn how to hack into the robots. He and Barry bond over the pressure of having to learn such skills in a short amount of time. Cyborg learns that the only way to do so is to get into a certain computer located in Metropolis, so the group sneaks into the city. Batman plans how to defeat the armies and orders the others what to do. Meanwhile, Mera and a group of aquatic animals help Aquaman escape.

Using Circe's magic, the mind controlled Amazonians cross the ocean and meet with Orm's troops, enacting the final part of their plan. Orm and Circe request that evil Superman give them the piece, but he stands his ground first, asking if they truly want to resurrect Lex Luthor instead of their claimed 'loved ones' such as the deceased queen of Atlantis. During the standoff, Lex Luthor Jr alerts Superman that Cyborg has hacked into the army and he is trying his best to salvage the robot army. Orm and Circe help Superman by attacking the army that has turned against him. In Atlantis, Aquaman has escaped with Mera, and they battle their way through the army loyal to Orm and are helped by those who are against him. Superman pushes his way through the army to find Cyborg. When he's distracted, Circe and Orm race against Batman to steal the 3rd piece from Superman's troops. Aquaman, with his troops, arrives to save Batman (who is fighting Orm and his army) and battles Orm for the piece, while Wonder Woman fights Circe. Flash and alternative Flash are protecting Cyborg by scouting the area and fighting off the army alongside the robots, but they are beginning to get overwhelmed. Just as Orm's troops are about to get to Cyborg, Aquaman defeats Orm, and obtains control of the army again. Wonder Woman defeats Circe and gains the piece back. However, Superman is shown to be too powerful and temporarily cuts Cyborg off from the computer (the Flash manages to save Cyborg) and gains control of his robot army again. Just as Batman is about to gain the 3rd piece, and the Flash (having the other two pieces that his teammates handed him) is just about to hand the rest to Batman, Superman arrives in front of Batman, grabs the 3rd piece, and destroys it.

The two Flashes run towards Superman and when he hears (from the transmitter) that the piece is destroyed, the Flash believes all hope is lost, but alternative Flash tells him to keep on running, and the alternative Flash will use his own speed to add onto Flash's speed. The Flash, after many previous failed attempts, finally is able to run fast enough to go back in time. With the other two pieces in hand, he manages to piece it together with the third piece in the very distant past, and a glowing orb is created. Flash grabs the orb and returns to the present (only with the orb, but accidentally dropping the other pieces back into the past). Using the orb, he resurrects Superman.

Superman sees the destruction of Metropolis, and flies over to meet Lois. However, evil Superman is right next to her. The two battle while the rest of the group fights the robot army, with Cyborg and Lex Luthor Jr trying to outdo each other.

However, Circe had managed to plant a mind control Flash at the last minute, and manages to take over his mind after he resurrects Superman. Now with her consciousness in Flash, Circe orders Lex Luthor to be resurrected. Queen Hippolyta (now free from mind control thanks to Wonder Woman) attacks Circe to stop her, but it's too late, though the Flash regains his consciousness again. Lex Luthor steps in between Cyborg and his son's battle and gains control back of his robot army, which he has security access to through his DNA (as verification) and mind, and he orders Lex Luthor Jr to revert loyalty of his human troops back to him.

During the Superman battle, Evil Superman realizes Lex Luthor has been resurrected and he has been betrayed. The Atlanteans, Amazonians, and the heroes all battle Lex Luthor, but due to the hidden weapon upgrades that Lex Luthor had been developing before his death (and only Lex Luthor could unleash since they required his permission and DNA verification to do), they prove too powerful. These upgrades are enhanced by Circe's magic and Orm's combined technology. The monster that Lex Luthor created in BvS is remade and is far more powerful than it was before. Lex Luthor takes the hidden kryptonite out of his body and Circe fuses it onto the monster. Alternative Flash tries to stop Lex Luthor but is killed when the monster protects its maker. Evil Superman sees this, remembers what Lois said about 'who he really is', and Superman tells him that they have to work together to stop the monster. The two fight the monster while Batman devises a plan to stop the robot army. Evil Superman realizes that, just like in BvS, the only way to stop the monster is by sacrificing himself. With the help of Superman, Evil Superman sacrifices himself, and Batman defeats the robot army.

With evidence brought back from alternative Flash, and other information found by Cyborg, the public learns the truth about how Lex Luthor framed Superman and Batman. Lois writes an article about the heroics performed that day, Lex Luthor is thrown in jail, and the Justice League is formed. Queen Hippolyta regains control of the Amazons, and Aquaman is crowned King of Atlantis. The Flash and Cyborg are seen chilling around the city. The final shot is of the 6 heroes overseeing the construction of the Justice League watchtower.